

Of Englishe Dogges,
the diuersities, the names,
the natures, and the properties.

A Short
Treatise written in latine

by Iohannes Casus of late memo-rie, Doctor of Philosophie in the Vniuersitie of Cambridge,

And newly translated into Eng-lishe by Abraham Fleming Student.

Natura etiam in brutis vito ostendit suam.

Scene and allowed.

Imprinted at London

by Richard Iohnes, and are to be solde ouer against S. Sepulchres Church without Newgate.

1576.

Casus

189. e. 209

¶ A Profopopoicall speache of the Booke.

Some tell of starres th'influence straunge,
Some tell of byrdes which fie in th'ayre,
Some tell of .beastes on land which raunge,
Some tell of fishe in riuers fayre,
Some tell of serpentes sundry sortes,
Some tell of plantes the full effect,
Of English dogges I sound reportes,
Their names and natures I detect,
My forhed is but baulde and bare :
But yet my bod'ys beutifull,
For pleasaunt flowres in me there are,
And not so fyne as plentifull :
And though my garden plot so greene,
Of dogges receaue the trampling feete,
Yet is it swept and kept full cleene,
So that it yeelds a saour sweete.

Ab.Fle.

DOCTISSIMO VIRO, ET

Patrono suo fingulari D. Perne, Elienſis eccleſiæ Cathedralis digniſſimo Decano, Abrahamus Flemingus, ευδαίμωνιαν.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

THE following pages are a reprint, line for line, and even error for error, of the earliest book on dogs in the English language. We have not attempted to reproduce the whole of the work in fac-simile, as the original is printed in old English black letter, and it would, therefore, have been tedious to the general reader; but the arrangement and general character have been carefully preserved throughout, and the title page is an exact copy, taken by photography, of the one to the book in the British Museum.

MAY, 1880.

illa palude neruose emergebat, atque elutata est. Quã voraginẽ simulatque euaserat, sic effloruit, adeoque increuit, vt vnquamque

B 2

NOV 80
BODLEY

DOCTISSIMO VIRO, ET

Patrono suo fingulari D. Perne, Eliensis ecclesiæ Cathedralis dignissi-mo Decano, Abrahamus Flemingus,

ευχαριστιαν.

Cripfit non multis abhinc annis (op-time Patrono) et non impostè scripsit, vir omnibus optimarum literarum remis instruc-tissimus, de doctorum grege non malè meritus, tuæ dignitati familiaritatis nexu coniunctissi-mus, clarissimum Cantabrigiensiæ academiæ lumen, gēma, et gloria, Johannes Caius, ad

Conradum Gesnerum summum suum, hominem peritissimum, indaga-torem rerum reconditarum sagacissimum, pulcherrimaq. historiarum naturalium panoplia exornatū, epitomen de cambus Britannicis non tam breuem quàm elegantem, et vtilem, epitomen inquam variis variorum experimentorum argumentis concinnatam; in cuius titulum cū forte incidissem, et nouitate re inonnihil delectarer, interpretationem Anglicam aggressus sum. Postquam vero finem penso imposuissem, repentina quædam de opusculi dedicatione cogitatio oboriebatur tādemque post multas multarum rerum iactationes, beneficiarum tuorum (Orna-tissime vir) vnica recordatio, instar rutilantis stellæ, quæ radiorum splendore quaslibet caliginosas teterrimæ obliuionis nebulas dissipat, et memoriæ serenitatem, plusquā solarem, inducit, mihi illuxit; nec nō officii ratio quæ funestissimis insensæ fortunæ fulminibus conquassata, lacerata, et convulsa, penè perierat, fractas vires multamq. debilitates colligebat, pristinum robur recuperavit, tandemque aliquando ex Lethea illa palude neruose emergebat, atque elucata est. Quā voraginē simulatque euaserat, sic effloruit, adeoque increuit, vt vnamquamque

Epistola

animi mei cellulā in sui ditionem atque imperii amplitudinem raperet. Nunc vero in contemplatione meritorum tuorum versari non desino, quorum magnitudinem nescio an tam tenui et leuidensi orationis filo possim circumscribere: Hoc, Ædepol, me non mediocriter mouet, non leuiter torquet, non languide pungit. Est præterea alia causa quæ mihi scrupulum injicit, et quodammodo exulcerat, ingrati nempe animi suspicio a qua, tanquam ab aliqua Lernæa Hydra, pedibus (vt aiunt) Achilleis semper fugi, et tamē valde pertimesco ne officij mora et procrastinatio (vt ita dicam) obscœnam securitatis labem nomini meo inurat, coque magis expauesco quod peruulgatum illud atque decantatum poetæ carmen memoriæ occurrebat.

Dedecus est semper sumere nilque dare.

Sed (Ornatissime vir) quemadmodū metus illius mali me magnopere affligebat atque fodicabat, ita spes alterius boni, nempe humanitatis tuæ, qua cœteris multis interuallis præluxeris, origit suffulcitque: Ea etiam spes alma et opima iubet et hortatur aliquod quale quale sit, officij specimen cum allacritate animi prodere. Hisce itaque persuasionibus victus me morigerum præbui, absolutamque de canibus Britannicis interpretationē Anglicam, tibi potissimum vtpote patrono singulari, et vnico Mæcenati dedicandū proposui: non quod tam ieiuno et exili munere immensum meritorum tuorum mare metiri machiner, non quod religiosas aures sacratasque, prophanæ paginæ explicatione obtundere cupiam, nec quod nugatoriis friuolisque narrationibus te delectari arbitrer, cum in diuiniore exercitationibus totus sis: sed potius (cedat fides dicto) quod insignis ille egregiusque liber alium artium, et præcipuē medicæ facultatis princeps (qui hoc opusculum contexit) ita vixit dum vixerat adeoque inclaruit, vt hand scio (vt ingenuē fatear quod sentio) an post funer a parem sibi superstitem reliquerit. Deinde quod hunc libellum summo studio et industria elaboratum in transmarinas regiones miserat, ad hominem omni literarum genere, et præsertim occultarū rerum Dedicatoria.

cognitione, quæ intimis naturæ visceribus et medullis insederat (O ingeniū niueo lapillo dignū) cuius difficultates Laberynthæis anfractibus flexuosisque recessibus impeditas perscrutari et investigare (deus bone, quam ingès labor, quam infinitum opus,) excultum, Conradum Gesnerum scriberet, quæ tantam gratiam conciliauit vt non solum amicissimo osculo exciperet, sed etiam studiose lectitaret, accuratè vteretur, inexhaustis denique viribus, tanquam perspicacissimus draco vellus aureum, et oculis plusquam aquilinis custodiret. Postremo quemadmodum hanc epitomen à viro verè docto ad virum summa nominis celebritate decoratum scriptam fuisse accepimus, ita eandem ipsam (pro titulo Britannico) Britanico sermone, licet ineleganti, vaitata et populari, ab esuriente Rhetore donatam, tuis (eruditissime vir) manibus commendo vt tuo sub patrocino in has atque illas regionis nostræ partes intrepide proficiscatur; obtestorque ut hunc libellum, humilem et obscuram inscriptionem gerentem, argumentum nouum et antehæc non auditum complectientem, ab omni tamen Sybaritica obscenitate remotissimum, æqui bonique consulas,

Tue dignitati deditissimus

Abrahamus

Flemingus.

Translation.

To the most learned man, and his especial patron, E. Perne, most worthy Dean of Ely Cathedral church, Abraham Fleming dedicates.

Not many years ago (O best of patrons) a man most advised in every branch of life; one who has deserved well of the company of the learned; bound by the ties of family to yourself; a most shining light of the University of Cambridge; its jewel and glory, John Caius, wrote not without elegance to Conrad Gesner, a man exceedingly skilled and sagacious in the investigation of recondite matters; a man armed with everything that relates to natural history; the same man wrote an epitome concerning British dogs, not so concise as elegant and useful; an epitome compact of the various arguments and experiences of many minds; a book which when by chance I had met with it, and was covered with delight with the novelty of its appearance, I attempted to translate into English. After I had finished my task, a sudden conceit arose in me touching the dedication of the pamphlet, and after tossing many thoughts to and fro, the recollections (most ornate sir) of your benefits, as a ruddy star, by the splendour of its radiance, dissipates the misty clouds of the most foul oblivion, and brings a serenity brighter than that of the sun to the memory, shone on me; and that sentiment of duty which shaken by the most deadly bolts of hostile fortune torn and convulsed, had almost died, collected its shattered and most weakened strength, recovered its pristine vigour, and at last, from that bog of Lethe, nobly extricated itself and emerged. Out of which whirlpool as soon as it had escaped, it so flourished and so increased that it caught every cell of my mind under the influence of its rule and command. Now, however, I cease not to be occupied in the contemplation of your merits, the magnitude of which can scarcely be circumscribed in my thin coarse and slight thread of speech. This fact, by Jove, does not move me lightly, distresses me in no common manner, and pricks me with no shallow wound. There is besides another cause, which makes me pause, and in some manner tortures me, namely the suspicion of ingratitude, from which, as from another Lernean hydra, I have ever fled (as the phrase runs) with Achillean feet, and still I very much fear lest delay and procrastination of my duty brand my name with a shameful mark of carelessness. This so much the more I fear because that truth and common verse of the poet comes into my mind

It is a shame always to receive and never to give.

But (O most ornate Sir!) however the fear of that ill mightily stirs and Translation (continued).

discomposes me, yet the expectation of another good, that is of your humanity, in which quality you shine far beyond other men, restores and buoys me up. That gentle and excellent hope commands and exhorts me to produce some specimen or token of my duty, however small, with alacrity. By these inducements conquered, I proposed free interpretation into English of the treatise on British dogs, and have dedicated it to you rather than to anyone else as my one patron, and unique Mæcenas. Not because I supposed that the unmeasurable sea of your merits could be gaged by so jejune and poor a gift; not because I was anxious to weary your sacred and religious years with the explanation of a profane page; nor because I supposed that you would be delighted with idle and frivolous matter, occupied as you are entirely in divine lucubrations, but rather (if I may be believed) because that egregious and noble prince of the liberal arts, and more especially of the faculty of medicine, who composed this work, so flourished while he lived, and obtained so brilliant a fame, that I know not honestly to confess what I feel, if after his death, he has left any like him. Lastly because he had sent this little book to Conrad Gesner, elaborated with the utmost industry into lands beyond the sea, to a man remarkable for his knowledge of all kinds of literature, and especially for his acquaintance with occult matters, which is settled in the inmost bowels and marrows of Nature (O talent worthy of a white stone!), whose difficulties, entangled by Labyrinthian windings and tortuous flexuosities I have investigated (O good God! how great a labour and how infinite a travail!) which raised such favour and conciliation in the breast of Conrad Gesner, that he not only received it with a friendly kiss, but also read it studiously, and used it accurately, with the inexhausted strength by which the dragon guards the fleece of gold, and kept it with more vigilant eyes than the eagle. Lastly, since we have heard that this epitome was written by a truly learned man to a man adorned with the highest celebrity of fame, so the epitome, in English speech, however inelegant, is yet common and popular to your hands. O most erudite Sir, I beseech you to command, that under your patronage, it may boldly go forth into all parts of our country, and I solemnly pray you to receive from me this book bearing a humble and obscure inscription, but embracing an argument new and as yet unheard of; as well as entirely free from any Sybaritic obscenity.

The most bounden to your service,

(Signed) ABRAHAM FLEMING.

To the well disposed Reader.

S every manifest effect proceedeth frō som certain cause, so the penning of this present abridgement (gentle and courteous reader) issued from a speciall occasion. For Conradus Gesnerus, a man whiles he liued, of incomparable knowledge, and manyfold experience, being neuer satisfied with the sweete sappe of vnderstanding, requested Iohannes Caius a profound clarke and a rauennous deuourer of learning (to his praise be it spokē, though the language be somewhat homely) to write a breuiary or short treatise of such dogges as were ingendred within the borders of England : To the contentation of whose minde and the vtter accomplishment of whose desire, Caius spared no study, (for the acquaintance which was betweene them, as it was confirmed by continuance, and established vpon vnfainednes, so was it sealed with vertue and honesty), withdrew himself from no labour, repined at no paines, forsooke no trauaile, refused no endeour, finally pretermitted no opportunity or circumstance which seemed pertinent and requisite to the performance of this litle libell. In the whole discourse wherof, the booke, to consider the substance, being but a pamphlet or skantling, the argument not so fyne and affected, and yet the doctrine very profitable and necessarye, he vseth such a smoothe and comely style, and tyeth his inuention to such methodicall and orderly proceedings, as the elegantnes and neatnesse of his Latine phrase (being pure, perfect, and vnmingled) maketh the matter which of it selfe is very base and clubbishe, to appeare (shall I say tollerable) nay rather commendable and effectuall. The sundry sortes of

To to Reader.

Englishe dogges he discovereth so evidently, their natures he rippeth vp so apparently, their manners he openeth so manifestly, their qualities he declareth so skilfully, their proportions he painteth out so perfectly, their colours he describeth so artificially, and knytteth all these in such shortnesse and breuity, that the mouth of th'adversary must needes confesse & giue sentence that commendation ought to bee his rewarde, and praise his deserued pension. An ignoraunt man woulde neuer have bene drawne into this opinion, to thincke that there had bene in England such variety & choice of dogges, in all respectes (not onely for name but also for qualitie) so diuerse and vnlike. But what cannot learning attaine? what cannot the key of knowledge open? what cannot the lampe of vnderstanding lighten? what secretes cannot discretion detect? finally what cannot experience comprehend? what huge heapes of histories hath Gesnerus houred vp in volumes of a large syze? Fishes in fioudes, Cattell on lande, Byrdes in the ayre, how hath he sifted them by their naturall differences, how closely and in how narrow a compasse hath he couched mighty and monstrous beasts, in bygnesse lyke mountaines, the bookes themselues being lesser then Molehilles. The lyfe of this man was not so great a restority of comfort, as his death was an vicer or wound of sorrow; the losse of whom Caius lamented, not so much as he was his faithfull friende, as for that he was a famous Philosopher, and yet the former reason (being in very deede vehement and forceable) did stinge him with more grieffe, then he peradventure was willing to disclose. And though death be counted terrible for the time, and consequently vnhappy, yet Caius aduoucheth the death of Gesner most blessed, luckie, and fortunate, as in his Booke intituled De libris proprijs, appeareth. But of these two Eagles sufficient is spoken as I suppose, and yet litle enough in consideration of their dignitie and worthines. Neurthelesse litle or mickle, something or nothing, substance or shadow take all in good part, my meaning is by a fewe wordes to wyne credit to this worke, not so much for mine owne Englishe Translation as for the singular commendation of them, challenged of dutie and desart. Wherefore gentle Reader I commit them to thy memorie, and their bookes to thy courteous censure. They were both learned men, and painefull practicioners in their professions, so much the more therefore are their workes worthy estimation, I would it were in me to aduance them as I wishe, the worst (and yet both, no doubt, excellent) hath deserved a monument of immortality. Well there is no more to be added but this, that as the translatiō of this booke was attempted, finished, and published of goodwill (not onely to administer pleasure, as to afford profit) so it is my desire and request that my labour therein employed may be acceptable, as I hope it shalbe to men of indifferent iudgement. As for such as shall snarr and snatch at the Englishe abrydgement, and te are the Translatour, being absent, with the teeth of spightfull enuye, I conclude in breuity there eloquence is but currishe, if I serue in their meat with wrong sawce, ascribe it not to vn-skilfulnesse in coquery, but to ignoraunce in their diet, for as the Poet sayeth

To the Reader.

Non satis est ars sola coquo, sewire palato :

Nanque coqus domini debet habere gulam :

It is not enough that a cooke vnderstand,

Except his Lordes stomack he holde in his hand.

To winde vp all in a watcheworde I saye no more, But doe well, and Farewell.

His and his Friendes,

Abraham

Fleming.

The first Section of this discourse.

¶ The Preamble or entraunce, into this treatise.

Wrote unto you (well beloued friend Gesner) not many yeares past, a manyfolde historie, contayning the diuers formes and figures of Beastes, Byrdes, and Fyashes, the sundry shapes of plantes, and the fashions of Hearbes, &c.

I wrote moreouer, vnto you seuerally, a certaine abridgement of Dogges, which in your discourse vpon the fourmes of Beastes in the seconde order of mylde and tameable Beastes, where you make mencion of Scottishe Dogges, and in the wynding vp of your Letter written and directed to Doctour Turner, comprehending a Catalogue or rehersall of your bookes not yet extant, you promised to set forth in print, and openly to publishe in the face of the worlde among such your workes as are not yet come abroade to lyght and sight. But, because certaine circumstaunces were wanting in my brenary of Englishe Dogges (as seemed vnto mee), I stayed the publication of the same, making promise to send another abroade, which myght be commytted to the handes, the eyes, the eares, the mindes, and the iudgements of the Readers. Wherefore that I myght perfourme that precisely which I promised solempnly, accomlishe my determination, and satisfy your expectacion: which art a man desirous.

A treatise of and capeable of all kinde of knowledge, and very earnest to be acquainted with all experimentes: I wyll expresse and declare in due order, the grand and generall kinde of English Dogges, the difference of them, the vse, the propertyes and the diuerse natures of the same, making a tripartite diuision in this sort and maner.

All English Dogges be eyther of,	}	A gentle kinde, seruing the game. A homely kind, apt for sun- dry necessary vases. A currishe kinde, meete for many toyes.
-------------------------------------	---	---

Of these three sortes or kindes so meane I to entreate, that the first in the first place, the last in the last roome, and the myddle sort in the middle seate be handled. I cal the vninersally all by the name of Englishe dogges, as well because England only, as it hath in it English dogs, so it is not without Scottishe, as also for that wee are more inclined and delighted with the noble game of hunting, for we Englishmen are adicted and ginen to that exercise, and painefull pastime of pleasure, as well for the plenty of fleshe which our Parkes and Forests doe foster, as also for the opertunitie and conuenient leisure which wee obtaine, both which, the Scottes want. Wherefore seeing that the whole estate of kindly hunting consisteth principally,

In these two pointes,	{	In chasing the beast } that { hunting } In taking the byrde } is in { fowleing }
--------------------------	---	---

It is necessary and requisite to vnderstand, that there are two sortes of Dogges by whose meanes, the feates within specified are wrought, and these practyces of actiuetie cunningly and curiously compassed.

Two kindes of Dogges	}	One which rouseth the beast and conti- nueth the chase. Another which spryngeth the byrde and bewrayeth flight by pursuite,
-------------------------	---	--

Both which kyndes are tearmed of the Latines by one common name that is, Canes Venatici, hunting dogges. But because we Englishe men make a difference betweene hunting and fowleing, for that they are called by these seurall wordes, Venatio & Aucupium, so they tearme the Dogges whom they vse in these sundry games by diuers names, as those which serue for the beast, are called Venatici, the other which are vsed for the fowle are called Aucupatorij.

The first kind called Venatici I diuide into five sorts.	}	The first in perfect smelling	}	Excel- leth.
		The second in quicke spying
		The thirde in swiftnesse and quicknesse
		The fourth in smeling & nym- blenesse
		The fiftte in subtiltie and deceit- fulnesse,

Of the Dogge called a Harrier, in Latine Leucarius.

THat kinde of dogge whom nature hath indued with the vertue of smelling, whose property it is to vse a lustines, a readines, and a courageousnes in hunting, and draweth into his nostrells the ayre or sent of the beast pursued and followed, we call by this word Sagax, the Grecians by thys word ιχνησιου of tracing or chasing by y foote, or ειυλάτιου of the nostrells, which be the instrumentes of smelling. Wee may knowe these kinde of Dogges by their long, large, and bagging lippes, by their hanging eares, reachyng downe both sydes of their chappes, and by the indifferent and measurable proportion of their making. This sort of Dogges we call Leucarius Harriers, that I may comprise the whole nūber of them in certaine specialties, and apply to them their proper and peculier names, for so much as they cannot all be reduced and brought vnder one sorte, considering both the sundry uses of them, and the difference of their service whereto they be appointed.

Some for	}	The Hare	} Some for one thing and some for another.
		The Foxe
		The Wolfe
		The Harte
		The Bucke
		The Badger
		The Otter
		The Polcat
		The Lobster
		The Weasell
		The Conny, &c.

As for the Conny, whom we haue lastly set downe, wee use not to hunt, but rather to take it, sometime with the nette sometime with the ferret, and thus euery seuerall sort is notable and excellent in his naturall qualitie and appointed practice. Among these sundry sortes, there be some which are apt to hunt two diuers beastes, as the Foxe otherwhiles, and other whiles the Hare, but they hunt not with such towardnes and good lucke after them, as they doe that whereunto nature hath formed and framed them, not onely in externall composition & making, but also inward faculties and conditions, for they swarue sometimes, and doo otherwise then they should.

Of the Dogge called Terrar, in Latine Terrarius.

A Nother sorte there is which hunteth the Foxe and the Badger or Greye onely, whom we call Terrars, because they (after the manner and custome of ferrets in searching for Connyes) creepe into the gronde, and by that meanes make afrayde, nypppe, and byte the Foxe and the Badger in such sort, that eyther they teare them in piieces with theyr teeth beyng in the bosome of the earth, or else hayle and pull them perforce out of their lurking angles, darke dongeons, and close caues, or at the least through cōceued feare, drine them out of their hollow harbours, in so much that they are compelled to prepare speedy flight, and being desirous of the next (albeit not the safest) refuge, are otherwise taken and intrapped with snares and nettes layde ouer holes to the same purpose. But these be the least in that kynde called Sagas.

Of the Dogge called a Bloudhounde in Latine Sanguinarius.

THe greater sort which serue to hunt, hauing lippes of a large syze & eares of no small lenght, doo, not onely chase the beast whiles it liueth (as the other doo of whom mencion aboue is made) but beyng dead also by any maner of casualtie, make recourse to the place where it lyeth, hauing in this poynt an assured and infallible guyde, namely, the sent and sauour of the bloud sprinkled heere and there vpon the ground. For whether the beast beyng wounded, doth notwithstanding enioye life, and escapeth the handes of the huntesman, or whether the said beast beyng slayne is conuayed clenly out of the paroke (so that there be some signification of bloud shed) these Dogges with no lesse facilitie and easinesse, then auditie and greedinesse, can disclose and bewray the same by smelling, applying to their pursuit, agilitie and nimblenesse, without tediousnesse, for which consideration, of a singuler specialitie they deserved to bee called Sanguinarij bloudhounds. And albeit peraduenture it may chaunce, (As whether it chaunceth sealdome or sometime I am ignorant) that a peece of fleshe be subtilly stolne and conningly conuayed away with such prouisos and precaueats as thereby all apparaunce of bloud is eyther preuented, excluded, or concealed, yet these kinde of dogges by a certaine direction of an inwarde assured notyce and priuy marke, pursue the deede doers, through long lanes, crooked reaches, and weary wayes, without wandring awry out of the limites of the land whereon those desperate purloyners prepared their speedy passage. Yea, the natures of these Dogges is such, and so effectuall is their foresight, that they ca bewray, seperate, and pycke them out from among an infinite multitude and an innumerable company, creepe they neuer so farre into the thickest thronge, they will finde him out notwithstanding he lye hidden in wyld woods, in close and ouergrown groues, and lurke in hollow holes apte to harbour such vngracious gwestes. Moreouer, although they should passe ouer the water, thinking thereby to auoyde the pursute of the houndes, yet will not these dogges gine ouer their attempt, but presuming to swym through the streame, persener in their pursute, and when they be arriued and gotten the furthen bancke, they hunt vp and downe, to and fro runne they, from place to place shift they, vntil they haue attained to that plot of grounde where they passed ouer. And this is their practise, if perdie they canot at y' first time smelling, finde out the way which the deede doers tooke to escape. So at length get they that by arte, cunning, and dilligent indenour, which by fortune and lucke they cannot otherwyse ouercome. In so much that it seemeth worthely and wisely written by Ælianus in his firte book and xxxiv. Chapter. Τὸ ἐπιθυμητικὸν χαίρειν ἐκτετικόν. to bee as it were naturally instilled and powered into these kinde of dogges. For they wyll not pause or breath from their pursute vntill such tyme as they bee apprehended and taken that committed the facte. The owners of such houndes vse to keepe them in close and darke channells in the day time, and let them lose at liberty in the night season, to th'intent that they myght with more courage and boldnesse practise to follow the fellon in the euening and solitarie houres of darkenesse, when such yll disposed varlots are principally purposed to play their impudent pageants, and imprudent prances. These houndes (vpon whom this present portion of our treatise runneth) when they are to follow such fellows as we haue before rehersed, vse not that liberty to ranage at wil, which they haue otherwise when they are in game (except upon necessary occasion, whereon dependeth an urgent an effectuall perswasion), when such purloyners make speedy way in fight, but beyng restrained and drawne backe from running at random with the lease, the ende whereof the owner holding in his hand is led, gyuded and directed with such swiftenesse and slownesse (whether he go on foote or whether he ryde on horsebacke), as he himselfe in harte would wishe for the more easie apprehension of these venturous varlots. In the borders of England and Sotland (the often and accustomed stealing of cattell so procuring) these kinde of Dogges are very much vsed and they are taught and trayned up first of all to hunt cattell as well of the smaller as of the greater growth, and afterwarde (that qualitie relinquished and left) they are learned to pursue such pestilent persons as plant they pleasure in such practises of purloyning as we haue already declared. Of this kinde there is nene that taketh the water naturally, except it please you so to suppose of them whych follow the Otter, whych sometimes haunte the lande, and sometime useth the water. And yet neuerthelesse all the kind of them boyling and boyling with greedy desire of the pray which by swymming passeth through riuer and flood, plung amyds the water, and passe the streame with their pawes. But this propertie proceedeth from an earnest desire wherwith they be inflamed, rather then from any inclination issuing from the ordinance and appoyntment of nature. And albeit some of this sort in English be called Brache, in Scottishe Rache, the cause hereof resteth in the shее sex and not in the generall kinde, for we English men call bytches belonging to the hunting kinde of Dogges, by the tearme aboue mencioned. To bee short it is proper to the nature of houndes, some to keepe silence in hunting untill such tyme as there is game offered. Other some so soone as they smell out the place where the beast lurketh, to bewray it immediately by their importunate barking, notwithstanding it be farre of many furlongs cowchyng close in his cabbyn. And these Dogges the younger they be, the more wantonly barcke they, and the more liberally, yet oftymes without necessitie, so that in them, by reason of theyr young yeares and want of practise, small certaintie is to be reposed. For continuance of tyme, and experience in game, ministreth to these houndes not onely cunning in running, but also (as in the rest) an assured foresight what is to bee done, principally, being acquainted with their masters watchwordes, eyther in reuoking or imboldening them to serue the game.

Of the Dogge called the Gaschounde, in Latine Agaseus.

THis kinde of Dogge which pursueth by the eye, prenayleth little, or neuer a whit, by any benefite of the nose that is by smelling, but excelleth in perspicuitie and sharpenesse of sight altogether, by the vertue whereof, being singuler and notable, it hunteth the Foxe and the Hare. Thys Dogge will choose and separte any beast from among a great flocke or hearde, and such a one will it take by election as is not lancke, leane and hollow, but well spyed, smoothe, full, fatte, and round, it followes by the direction of the eyesight, which in deede is cleere constant, and not uncertaine, if a beast be wounded and gone astray this Dogge seeketh after it by the steadfastnes of the eye, if it chauce peradventure to returne and be mingled with the residue of the flocke, this Dogge spyeth it out by the vertue of his eye, leauing the rest of the cattell vntouched, and after he hath set sure sight upō it, he separateth it from among the company and hauing so done neuer ceaseth untill he haue wearyed the Beast to death. Our countrey men call this dogge Agasæum. A gasehounde because the beames of his sight are so stedfastly settled and vnmoueably fastened. These Dogges are much and vsually occupyed in the Northern partes of England more then in the Southern parts, and in fealdy landes rather then in bushy and woody places, horsemen vse them more then footemen to th'intent that they might prouoke their horses to a swift galloppe (wherwith they are more delighted then with the pray it selfe), and that they might accoustome theyr horse to leape ouer hedges and ditches, without stoppe or stumble, without harme or hassard, without doubt or daunger, and so escape with safegard of lyfe. And to the ende that the ryders themselues when necessitie so constrained, and the feare of further mischiefe inforced, myght saue themselues vndamnified, and prenent each perilous tempest by preparing speedy flight, or else by swift pursute made vpon theyr enimy, myght both ouertake them, encounter with them, and make a slaughter of them accordingly. But if it fortune so at any time that this Dogge take a wrong way, the master making some vsual signe and familiar token, he returneth forthwith, and taketh the right and ready trace, beginning his chase a fresh, & with a cleare voyce, and a swift foote followeth the game with as much courage and nimblenesse as he did at the first.

Of the Dogge called the Grehounde, in Latine Leporarius.

THere is another kinde of Dogge which for his incredible swiftnesse is called Leporarius a Grehounde because the principall seruice of them dependeth and consisteth in starting and hunting the hare, which Dogges likewyse are indued with no lesse strength then lightnes in maintenance of the game, in seruing the chase, in taking the Bucke, the

c 2

Harte, the Dowe, the Foxe, and other beastes of semblable kinde ordained for the game of hunting. But more or lesse, each one according to the measure and proportion of theyr desire, and as might and habilitie of theyr bodyes will permit and suffer. For it is a spare and bare kinde of Dogge, (of fleshe but not of bone) some are of a greater sorte, and some of a lesser, some are smooth skynned & some are curled, the bigger therefore are appoynted to hunt the bigger beasts, & the smaller serue to hunt the smaller accordingly. The nature of these dogges I find to be wonderful by y' testimoniall of histories. For, as John Froisart the Historiographer in his 4. lib. reporteth. A Grehound of King Richard, the second y' wore the Crowne and bare the Scepter of the Realme of England, neuer knowing any man, beside the Kings person, whē Henry Duke of Lancaster came to the castle of Flinte to take King Richarde. The Dogge forsaking his former Lord & master came to Duke Henry, fawned upon him with such resemblaunces of goodwyll and conceaued affection, as he fauoured King Richarde before: he followed the Duke, and vtterly left the King. So that by these manifest circumstances a man myght iudge this Dogge to haue bene lightened wyth the lampe of foreknowledge & vnderstāding, touchyng his olde masters miseryes to come, and vnhappinesse nye at hand, which King Richarde himselfe evidently perceaued, accounting this deede of his Dogge a Prophecy of his ouerthrowe.

Of the Dogge called the Lewiner, or Lyemmer in Latine Lorarius.

A Nother sort of dogges be there, in smelling singuler, and in swiftenesse incomparable. This is (as it were) a myddle kinde betwixt the Harier and the Grehounde, as well for his kinde, as for the frame of his body. And it is called in latine Lewinarius, a Lewitate, of lyghtnesse, and therefore may well be called a lyght hounde, it is also called by this worde Lorarius, a Loro, wherewith it is led. This Dogge for the excellency of his conditions, namely smelling and swift running, doth followe the game with more eagernes, and taketh the pray with a iolly quicknes.

Of the Dogge called a Tumbler, in Latine Vertagus.

THis sorte of Dogges, which compasseth all by craftes, fraudes, subtelties and deceiptes, we Englishe men call Tumlbers, because in hunting they turne and tumble, winding their bodyes about in circle wise, and then fearefully and violently venturing upō the beast, doth soddenly gripe it, at the very entrance and mouth of their receptacles, or closets before they can reconer meanes, to saue and succour themselves. This dogge vseth another craft and subteltie, namely, when he runneth into a warren, or setteth a course about a connyburrough, he hunteth not after them, he frayes them not by baroking, he makes no countenance or shadow of hatred against them, but dissembling friendship, and pretending fauour, passeth by with silence and quietnesse, marking and noting their holes diligently, wherin (I warrant you) he will not be ouershot nor deceaued. When he commeth to the place where Connyes be, of a certaintie, he croucheth downe close with his belly to the ground, Provided alwayes by his skill and polisie, that y' the winde bee neuer with him but against him in such an enterprise. And that the Connyes spie him not where he lurketh. By which meanes he obtaineth the sent and sanour of the Connyes, carryed towardes him with the wind & the ayre, either going to their holes, or cōming out, eyther passing this way, or running that way, and so prouideth by his circumspection, that the selly simple Conny is debarred quite from his hole (which is the hauen of their hope and the harbour of their health) and fraudulently circumvented and taken, before they can get the aduantage of their hole. Thus hauing caught his pray he carryeth it speedily to his Master, wayting his Dogges returne in some conuenient lurking corner. These Dogges are somewhat lesser than the houndes, and they be lancker & leaner, beside that they be somewhat prick eared. A man that shall marke the forme and fashion of their bodyes, may well call them mungrell Grehoundes if they were somewhat bigger. But notwithstanding they counteruaile not the Grehound in greatnes, yet will he take in one dayes space as many Connyes as shall arise to as bigge a burthen, and as heauy a load as a horse can carry, for deceit and guile is the instrument wherby he maketh this spoyle, which pernicious properties supply the places of more commendable qualities.

Of the Dogge called the theuishe Dogge in Latine Canis furax.

THe like to that whom we have rehearsed, is the theuishe Dogge, which at the mandate and bydding of his master steereth and leereth abroade in the night, hunting Connyes by the ayre, which is leuened with their sauer and conueyed to the sense of smelling by the meanes of the winde blowing towards him. During all which space of his hunting he will not barcke, least he shoulde bee preuidiciall to his owne aduantage. And thus watcheth and snatcheth up in course as many Connyes as his Master will suffer him, and beareth them to his Masters standing. The farmers of the country and uplandishe dwellers, call this kinde of Dogge a nyght curre, because he hunteth in the darke, But let thus much seeme sufficient for Dogges which serue the game, and disport of hunting.

¶ A Diall pertaining to the first Section.

Dogges seruing y'pastime of hunting beastes.	} are divided into	{ Hariers Terrars Bloudhounds Gasehounds Grehoundes Leiners or Lyemmers Tumblers Stealers	} In Latine called Ve- natici.
--	--------------------------	---	--

The seconde Section of this discourse.

Of gentle Dogges seruing the hauke, and first of the Spaniell, called in Latine Hispaniolus.

Vch Dogges as serue for fowling, I thinke conuenient and requisite to place in this seconde Section of this treatise. These are also to bee reckoned and accounted in the number of the dogges which come of a gentle kind, and of those which serue for fowling.

There be two sortes { The first findeth game on the land.
The other findeth game on the water. }

Such as delight on the land, play their partes, eyther by swiftnesse of foote, or by often questing, to search out and to spying the byrde for further hope of aduantage, or else by some secrete signe and priuy token bewray the place where they fall.

The first kinde of { The Hauke, such serue
The seconde, { The net, or, traine,

The first kinde haue no peulier names assigned vnto them, saue onely that they be denominated after the byrde which by naturall appointment he is allotted to take, for the which consideration.

Some be called { For the Falcon } Dogges, { The Phesant } and such like,
 { The Partridge }

The common sort of people call them by one generall word, namely Spaniells. As though these kinde of Dogges came originally and first of all out of Spaine, The most part of their skynnes are white, and if they be marked with any spotted, they are commonly red, and somewhat great therewithall, the heares not growing in such thicknesse but that the mixture of them maye easely be perceaued. Othersome of them be reddishe and blackishe, but of that sorte there be but a very few. There is also at this day among vs a newe kinde of dogge brought out of Fraunce (for we Englishe men are maruailous greedy gaping gluttons after nouelties, and couetous cornorautes of things that be seldom, rare, straunge, and hard to get.) And they bee speckled all ouer with white and black, which mingled colours incline to a marble blewe, which bewtifeyeth their skinnes and affordeth a seemely show of comlynesse. These are called French dogges as is aboue declared already.

The Dogge called the Setter, in Latine Index.

A Nother sort of Dogges be there, seruiceable for fowling, making no noise either with foote or with tounge, whiles they followe the game. These attend diligently vpon theyr Master and frame their conditions to such beokes, motions, and gestures, as it shall please him to exhibite and make, either going forward, drawing backward, inclining to the right hand, or yealding toward the left, (In making mencion of fowles my meaning is of the Partridge and the Quaile) when he hath founde the byrde, he keepeth sure and fast silence, he stayeth his steppes and wil proceede no further, and with a close, couert, watching eye, layeth his belly to the grounde and so creepeth forward like a worme. When he approacheth neere to the place where the birde is, he layes him downe, and with a marcke of his pawes, betrayeth the place of the byrdes last abode, whereby it is supposed that this kinde of dogge is called Index, Setter, being in deede a name most consonant and agreable to his quality. The place being knowne by the meanes of the dogge, the fowler immediatly openeth and spreadeth his net, intending to take them, which being done the dogge at the accustomed becke or vsuall signe of his Master ryseth vp by and by, and draweth neerer to the fowle that by his presence they might be the authors of their owne insnaring, and be ready intangled in the prepared net, which conning and artificiall indeuour in a dogge (being a creature domesticall or householde seruaunt brought vp at home with offalls of the trencher and fragments of victualls) is not much to be maruailed at, seing that a Hare (being a wilde and skippiashe beast) was seene in England to the astonishment of the beholders, in the yeare of our Lorde God, 1564 not onely dauncing in measure, but playing with his former feete vpon a tabbaret, and obseruing iust number of strokes (as a practicioner in that arte) besides that nipping & pinching a dogge with his teeth and clawes, & cruely thumping him with y' force of his feete. This is no trumpery tale, nor trifling toye (as I imagine) and therefore not vnworthy to be reported, for I reckon it a requitall of my trauaile, not to drowne in the seas of silence any speciall thing, wherein the prouidence and effectuall working of nature is to be pondered.

Of the Dogge called the water Spaniell, or finder, in Latine Aquaticus seuinquisitor.

That kinde of dogge whose seruice is required in fowling vpon the water, partly through a naturall towardnesse, and partly by diligent teaching, is indued with that property. This sort is somewhat bigge, and of a measurable greatnesse, hauing long, rough, and curled heare, not obtayned by extraordinary trades, but giuen by natures appointment, yet neuerthelesse (friend Gesner) I have described and set him out in this maner, namely powlde and notted from the shoulders to the hindermost legges, and to the end of his tayle, which I did for use and customs cause, that beyng as it were made somewhat bare and naked, by shearing of such superfluitie of heare, they might atchiue the more lightnesse, and swiftnesse, and be lesse hindered in swymming, so troublesome and needelesse a burthen being shaken of. This kinde of dogge is properly called Aquaticus, a water spaniel because he frequenteth and hath vsual recourse to the water where all his game & exercise lyeth, namely, waterfowles, which are taken by the helpe & seruice of them, in their kind. And principally duckes and drakes, wherupon he is lykewise named a dogge for the ducke, because in that qualitie he is excellent. With these dogges also we fetch out of the water such fowle as be stounge to death by any venemous worme, we vse them also to bring vs our boulted & arrowes out of the water (missing our maroke) whereat we directed our lenell, which otherwise we should hardly recouer, and oftentimes the restore to vs our shaftes which we thought neuer to see, touche or handle againe, after they were lost, for which circumstances they are called Inquisitores, searchers, and finders. Although the ducke otherwhiles notably deceaue both the dogge and the master, by dyuing vnder the water, and also by naturall subtilty, for if any man shall appoche to the place where they builde, breede, and syt, the hennes go out of their neastes, offering themselues voluntarily to the hãds, as it were, of such as draw nie their neastes. And a certaine weaknesse of their winges pretended, and infirmitie of their feete dissembled, they go so slowly and so leasurly, that to a mans thinking it were no masteryes to take them. By which deceitfull trickes they doe as it were entyse and allure men to follow them, till they be drawne a long distance from their neastes, which being compassed by their prouident conning, or conning providence they cut of all inconueniences which might growe of their returne, by using many carefull and curious caucates, least they often haunting bewray y^e place where the young ducklings be hatched. Great therefore is their desire, & earnest is their study to take heede, not only to their broode but also to themselves. For when they haue an ynking that they are espied they hide themselves vnder turfes or sedges, wherewith they couer and shrowde themselves so closely and so craftely, that (notwithstanding the place where they lurke be found and perfectly perceaued) there they will harbour without harme, except the water spaniell by quicke smelling discoouer they deceiptes.

Of the Dogge called the Fisher, in Latine

Canis Piscator.

THe Dogge called the fisher, whereof Hector Boethus writeth, which seeketh for fishe by smelling among rockes & stones, assuredly I knowe none of that kinde in Englande, neither haue I receaued by reporte that there is any suche, albeit I haue been diligent & busie in demanding the question as well of fishermen, as also of huntmen in that behalfe being carefull and earnest to learne and vnderstand of them if any such were, except you holde opinion that the beauer or Otter is a fishe (as many haue beleueed) & according to their beliefe affirmed, and as the birde Pupine, is thought to be a fishe and so accounted. But that kinde of dogge which followeth the fishe to apprehend and take it (if there bee any of that disposition and property) whether they do this for the game of hunting, or for the heate of hunger, as other Dogges do which rather then they will be famished for want of foodes, couet the carcasses of carrion and putrified fleshe. When I am fully resolved and disburthened of this doubt I wil send you certificate in writing. In the meane season I am not ignorant of that both Ælianus, and Ælius call the Beauer κίναροτάμιον a water dogge, or a dogge fishe, I know likewise thus much more, that the Beauer doth participate this propertie with the dogge, namely, that when fishes be scarse they leaue the water and ranuge vp and downe the lande, making an insatiable slaughter of young lembes vntil theyr paunches be replenished, and whē they haue fed themselues full of fleshe, then returne they to the water, from whence they came. But albeit so much be graunted that this Beauer is a dogge, yet it is to be noted that we reckon it not in the beadrowe of Englishe dogges as we haue done the rest. The sea Calfe, in like maner, which our country mē for breuitie sake call a Seele, other more largely name a Sea Vele maketh a spoyle of fishes betweene rockes and banckes, but it is not accounted in the catalogue or nūber of our Englishe dogges, notwithstanding we call it by the name of a Sea dogge or a sea Calfe. And thus much for our dogges of the second sort called in Latine Acupatorij, seruing to take fowle either by land or water.

¶ A Diall pertaining to the second Section

Dogges seruing the dis- port of fow- ling.	}	are di- uided into	}	Land spaniels Setters Water spani- els or finders.	}	called in latine Canes Au- cupatorij	}	The fisher is not of their num- ber but se- uerall.
--	---	--------------------------	---	---	---	---	---	---

The thirde Section of this abridgement.

Owe followeth in due order and convenient place our Englishe Dogges of the thirde gentle kinde, what they are called to what vse they serue, and what sort of people plant their pleasure in thē, which because they neede no curious canuassing and nye sytting, wee meane to bee so much the briefer.

Of the delicate, neate, and pretty kind of dogges called the Spaniel gentle, or the comforter, in Latine Melitæus or Fotor.

THere is, besides those which wee haue already deliuered, another sort of gentle dogges in this our Englishe soyle but exempted from the order of the residue, the Dogges of this kinde doth Callimachus call Melitæus, of the Iseland Melita, in the sea of Sicily, (what at this day is named Malta, an Iseland in deede famous and renoumed, with couragious and puisaunt souldiours valliauntly fighting vnder the banner of Christ their vnconquerable captaine) where this kind of dogges had their principall beginning.

These dogges are litle, pretty, proper, and fyne, and sought for to satisfie the delicatenesse of daintie dames, and wanton womens wills, instrumentes of folly for them to play and dally withall, to tryfle away the treasure of time, to withdraw their mindes from more commendable exercises, and to content their corrupted concupiscences with vaine disport (A selly shift to shunne yreksome ydnesse.) These puppies the smaller they be, the more pleasure they prouoke, as more meete play fellowes for mising mistrisses to beare in their bosoms, to keepe company withal in their chambers, to succour with sleepe in bed, and nouriahe with meate at bourde, to lay in their lappes, and licke their lippes as they ryde in their waggons, and good reason it should be so, for courtesnesse with fynenesse hath no fellowship, but featesse with neatenesse hath neighbourhood enough. That plausible prouerbe verified vpon a Tyrant, namely that he loued his sowe better then his sonne, may well be applyed to these kinde of people, who delight more in dogges that are deprived of all possibility of reason, then they doe in children that be capeable of wisdom and iudgement. But this abuse peradventure raineth where there hath bene long lacke of issue, or else where barrennes is the best blossome of bewty.

The vertue which remaineth in the Spaniell gentle otherwise called the comforter.

NOtwithstanding many make much of those pretty puppies called Spaniells gentle, yet if the question were demaunded what propertie in them they spye, which shoulde make them so acceptable and precious in their sight, I doubt their aunswere would be long a coyning. But seeing it was our intent to traualle in this treatise, so that y^e reader might reape some benefite by his reading, we will communicate vnto you such conieures as are grounded upon reason. And though some suppose that such dogges are fyt for no seruice, I dare say, by their leanes, they be in a wrong boxe. Among all other qualities therefore of nature, which be knowne (for some conditions are couered with continuall and thicke clouds, that the eye of our capacities cannot pearse through the) we find that these litle doges are good to asswage the sicknesse of the stomacke being oftentimes therevnto applyed as a plaster preseruatue, or borne in the bosom of the diseased and weake person, which effect is performed by theyr moderate heate. Moreouer the disease and sicknesse, chaungeth his place and entreth (though it be not precisely marked) into the dogge, which to be no vntruth, experience can testify, for these kinde of dogges sometimes fall sicke, and sometime die, without any harm, outwardly inforced, which is an argument that the disease of the gentleman or gentle woman or owner whatsoever, entreth into the dogge by the operation of heate intermingled and infected. And thus haue I hetherto handled dogges of a gentle kinde whom I haue comprehended in a triple diuisiō. Now it remaineth that I annex in due order such dogges as be of a more homely kinde.

A Diall pertaining to the
thirde Section.

In the third section is contained one kind of dog which is called the	{ Spaniell gentle or the cō- forter,	} It is also called	{ A chamber cō- panion A pleasant playfellow, A pretty worme	} gene- rally called Canis delica- tus.
---	---	---------------------	---	---

The fourth Section of this discourse

Dogges of a Course Kind seruing for many Necessary uses, called in Latine Canes Rustici, and first of the shepherds dogge, called in Latine Canis Pastoralis.

Dogges of the courser sort are { The shepherds dogge } These two are { The mastius or } the principall.
 { Bandogge. }

He first kinde, namely the shepherds hounde is very necessarye and profitable for the auoyding of harmes and inconueniences which may come to men by the means of beastes. The second sort serue to succour against the snares and attemptes of mischievous men. Our shepherdes dogge is not huge, vaste, and bigge, but of an indifferent stature and growth, because it hath not to deale with the bloudthyrsty wolf, sythence there be none in England, which happy and fortunate benefite is to be ascribed to the puisaunt Prince Edgar, who to thintent y^e the whole cuntry myght be euacuated and quite clered from wolves, charged & commaunded the welshemē (who were pestered with these butcherly beastes aboue measure) to paye him yearly tribute which was (note the wisdome of the King) three hundred Wolfes. Some there be which write that Ludwall Prince of Wales payde yeerly to King Edgar three hundred wolves in the name of an exaction (as we haue sayd before.) And that by the meanes hereof, within the compasse and tearme of foure yeares none of those noysome, and pestilent Beastes were left in the coastes of England and Wales. This Edgar wore the Crown royall, and bare the Scepter imperiall of this kingdome, about the yeere of our Lorde nyne hundred fifty, nyne. Synce which time we reede that no Wolfe hath bene seene in England, bred within the bounds and borders of this countrey, mary there have bene diuers brought ouer from beyonde the seas, for greedynesse of gaine and to make money, for gasing and gaping, staring, and standing to see them, being a straunge beast, rare, and seldom seene in England. But to returne to our shepherds dogge. This dogge either at the hearing of his masters voyce, or at the wagging and whisteling in his fist, or at his shrill and horse hissing bringeth the wandring weathers and straying sheepe, into the selfe same place where his masters will and wishe, is to haue thē, wherby the shepherd reapeth this benefite, namely, that with litle labour and no toyle or mouing of his feete he may rule and guide his flocke, according to his owne desire, either to haue them go forward, or to stand still, or to drawe backward, or to turne this way, or to take that way. For it is not in Englande, as it is in Fraunce, as it is in Flaunders, as it is in Syria, as it is in Tartaria, where the sheepe follow the shepherd, for heere in our country the shepherd followeth the sheepe. And sometimes the straying sheepe, when no dogge runneth before them, nor goeth about & beside them, gather themselues together in a flocke, when they heere the shepherd whistle in his fist, for feare of the Dogge (as I imagine) remembring this (if vnreasonable creatures may be reported to haue memory) that the Dogge commonly runneth out at his masters warrant which is his whistle. This haue we oftentimes diligently marked in taking our journey from towne to towne, when wee haue hard a shepherd whistle we haue rayned in our horse and stode styll a space, to see the prooffe and triall of this matter. Furthermore with this dogge doth the sheep-herd take sheepe for y^e slaughter, and to be healed if they be sicke, no hurt or harme in the world done to the simple creature.

D

Of the mastiue or Bandogge called in Latine Villaticus or Cathenarius.

THis kinde of Dogge called a mastiue or Bandogge is vaste, huge, stubborne, ugly, and eager, of a heuy and burthenous body, and therefore but of litle swiftnesse, terrible, and frightfull to beholde, and more feerce and fell then any Arcadian curre (notwithstāding they are sayd to haue their generation of the violent Lion.) They are called Villatici, because they are appoynted to watche and keepe farme places and cōūtry cotages sequestred from commō recourse, and not abutting vpon other houses by reason of distaunce, when there is any feare conceaued of theefes, robbers, spoylers, and night wanderers. They are seruiceable against the Foxe and the Badger, to drive wilde and tame swyne out of Medowes, pastures, glebelandes and places planted with fruite, to bayte and take the bull by the eare, when occasion so requireth. One dogge or two at the vttermost, sufficient for that purpose be the bull neuer so monstrous, neuer so feerce, neuer so furious, neuer so stearne, neuer so vntameable. For it is a kinde of dogge capeable of courage, violent and valiaunt, striking could feare into the harts of men, but standing in feare of no man, in so much that no weapons will make him shrinke, nor abridge his boldnes. Our Englishe men (to th' intent that theyr dogges might be the more fell and feerce) assist nature with arte, vse, and custome, for they teach theyr dogges to baite the Beare, to baite the Bull and other such like cruell and bloody beastes (appointing an ouerseer of the game) without any collar to defend theyr throtes, and oftentimes they traine them vp in fighting and wrestling with a man hauing for the safegarde of his lyfe, eyther a Pikestaffe, a clubbe, or a sworde and by vsing them to such exercises as these, theyr dogges become more sturdy and strong. The force which is in them surmounteth all beleefe, the fast holde which they take with their teeth exceedeth all credit, three of them against a Beare, fowre against a Lyon are sufficient, both to try masteryes with them and vtterly to ouermatch them. Which Henry the seuenth of that name, King of England (a Prince both politique & warlike) perceauing on a certaine time (as the report runneth) commaunded all such dogges (how many scener they were in number) should be hanged, beyng deeply displeased, and conceauing great disdaine that an yll faured rascall curre should with such violent villany, assault the valiaunt Lyon king of all beastes. An example for all subjects worthy remembraunce, to admoniahe them that it is no aduantage to them to rebel against y^e regiment of their ruler, but to keepe them within the limits of Loyaltie. I reede an history answerable to this of the selfe same Henry, who hauing a notable and an excellent fayre Falcon, it fortun'd that the kings Falconers, in the presence and hearing of his grace, highly commended his Maiesties Falcon, saying that it feared not to intermeddle with an Eagle, it was so venturous a byrde and so mighty, which when the King harde, he charged that the Falcon should be killed without delay, for the selfe same reason (as it may seeme) which was rehersed in the cōclusion of the former history concerning the same king. This dogge is called, in like maner, Cathenarius, a Cathena, of the chaine wherwith he is tyed at the gates, in y^e daytime, leas't beyng lose he should doe much mischief and yet might giue occasion of feare and terror by his bigge barking. And albeit Cicero in his oration had Pro. S. Ross. be of this opinion, that such Dogges as bareke in the broade day light shoulde haue their legges broken, yet our countrymen, on this side the seas for their carelesnes of lyfe setting all at cinque and sice, are of a contrary iudgement. For theefes roge vp and down in euery corner, no place is free from them, no not y^e prince's p'allace, nor the country mans cotage. In the day time they practise pilfering, picking, open robbing, and priuy stealing, and what legerdemaine lacke they: not fearing the shamefull and horrible death of hanging. The cause of which inconuenience doth not onely issue from nipping neede & wringing want, for all y^e steale, are not pinched with pouerty, but som steale to maintaine their excessive and prodigall expences in apparell, their lewdnes of lyfe, their hautines of hart, theyr wantonnes of maners, theyr wilfull ydlenes, their ambitious brauery, and the pryde of the sawcy Salacones' μεγαλοπρῶτον vaine glorious and arrogant in behauiour, whose delight dependeth wholly to mount nimbly on horsebacke, to make them leape lustely, spryng and prauonce, galloppe and amble, to runne a race, to wynde in compasse, and so forthe, liuing all together vpon the fatnesse of the spoyle. Other som ther be which steale, being thereto prouoked by penury & neede, like masterlesse mā applying themselues to no honest trade, but raunging vp and downe impudently begging, and complayning of bodily weakenesse where is no want of abilitie. But valiaunt Valentine th'emperour, by holsome lawes prouided that suche as hauing no corporall sicknesse, solde themselues to begging, pleded pouerty wyth pretended infirmitie, & cloaked their ydle and slouthfull life with colourable shifts and cloudy cossening, should be a perpetuall slaue and drudge to him, by whom their impudent ydlenes was bewrayed, and layed against them in publique place, least the insufferable slouthfullnes of such vagabondes should be burthenous to the people, or being so hatefull and odious, should growe into an example. Alfredus likewise in the government of his commonwealth, procured such increase of credite to iustice and upright dealing by his prudent actes and statutes, that if a mā traauiling by the hygh way of the countrey vnder his dominion, chaunced to lose a budget full of gold, or his capcase farsed with things of great value, late in the euening, he shoulde find it where he lost it, safe, sound, and vntouched the next morning, yea (which is a wonder) at any time for a whole monethes space if he sought for it, as Ingulphus

Oroyladensis in his Hystory recordeth. But in this our vnhappy age, in these (I say) our deuclishe dayes nothing can scape the clawes of the spoyler, though it be kept neuer so sure within the house, albeit the doores bee lockt and boulted round about. This dogge in like maner of Grecians is called sinsappes

Of the latinists Canis Cultos, in Englishe the Dogge keeper.

Borrowing his name of his seruice, for he doth not onely keepe farmers houses, but also merohaunts maisons, wherin great wealth, riches, substance and costly stuffe is reposed. And therefore were certain dogges founde and maintained at the common costes and charges of the Citizens of Rome in the place called Capitolium, to giue warning of theefes comming. This kind of dogge, is also called,

In latine Canis Lantarius in Englishe the Butchers Dogge

So called for the necessity of his vse, for his seruice affoordeth great benefite to the Butcher as well in following as in taking his cattell when neede constraineth, vrgeth, and requireth. This kinde of dogge is likewise called,

In latine Molossicus or Molossus.

After the name of a countrey in Epirus called Molossia, which harboureth many stoute, stronge, and sturdy Dogges of this sort, for the dogges of that countrey are good in deede, or else there is no trust to be had in the testimonie of writers. This dogge is also called,

In latine Canis Mandatarius a Dogge messin-ger or Carrier.

Upon substanciall consideration, because at his masters voyce and commaundement, he carrieth letters from place to place, wrapped vp cunningly in his lether collar, fastened thereto, or sowed close therin, who, least he should be hindered in his passage vseth these helpes very skilfully, namely resistance in fighting if he be not overmatched, or else swiftnesse & readinesse in running away, if he be vnable to buckle with the dogge that would faine have a snatch at his skinne This kinde of dogge is also called,

In latine Canis Lunarius, in Englishe the Mooner.

Because he doth nothing else but watch and warde at an ynoche, wasting the wearisome night season without slombering or sleeping, bawing & wawing at the Moone (that I may vse the word of Nonius) a qualitie in mine opinion straunge to consider. This kinde of dogge is also called,

In latine Aquarius in Englishe a water drawer.

And these be of the greater and the waighter sort drawing water out of wells and deepe pittes, by a wheele which they turne rounde about by the mouing of their burthenous bodies. This kinde of dogge is called in like maner.

Canis Sarcinarius in Latine, and may aptly be englished a Tynckers Curre.

Because with marueilous pacience they beare bigge budgettes fraught with Tynckers tooles, and mettall meete to mend kettles, porridge pottes, skellets, and chafers, and other such like trumpery requisite for their occupacion and loytering trade, easing him of a great burthen which otherwise he himselfe should carry vpon his shoulders, which condition hath challenged vnto them the foresaid name. Besides the qualities which we haue already recounted, this kind of dogges hath this principall propertie ingrafted in them, that they loue their masters liberally, and hate straungers despightfully, wherevpon it followeth that they are to their masters, in traouelling a singular safeguard, defending them forceably, from the inuasion of villons and theefes, preseruing their lyfes from losse, and their health from hassard, they fleshe from hacking and hewing with such like desperate daungers, For which consideration they are meritoriously tearmed,

In Latine Canes defensores defending dogges in our mother tounge.

If it chauce that the master bee oppressed, either by a multitude, or by the greater violence & so be beaten downe that he lye groueling on the grounde, (it is proued true by experience) that this Dogge forsaketh not his master, no not when he is staroke deade: But induring the force of famishment and the outrageous tempestes of the weather, most vigilantly watcheth and carefully/keepeth the deade carkasse many dayes, endeououring, furthermore, to kil the murtherer of his master, if he may get any advantage. Or else by barking, by howling, by furious iarring, snarring, and such like meanes betrayeth the malefactour as desirous to haue the death of his aforesayde Master rigorouslye reuenged. And example hereof fortunéd within the compasse of my memory. The Dogge of a certaine wayefaring man traauiling from the Citie of London directly to the Towne of Kingstone (most famous and renowned by reason of the triumphant coronation of eight seuerall Kings) passing ouer a good portion of his iourney was assaulted and set vpon by certaine confederate theefes laying in waight for the spoyle in Comeparcke, a perillous bottom, compassed about wyth woddes to well knowne for the manyfolde murders & mischiefeous robberies theyr committed. Into whose handes this passinger chaunced to fall, so that his ill lucke cost him the price of his lyfe. And that Dogge whose syer was Englishe (which Blondus registreth to haue bene within the banokes of his remembrance) manifestly perceauyng that his Master was murthered (this chaunced not farre from Paris, by the handes of one which was a suiter to the same womā, whom he was a wooer unto, dyd both bewraye the bloody butcher, and attempted to teare out the villons throate if he had not sought meanes to auoyde the reuenging rage of the Dogge. In fyers also which fortune in the silence and dead time of the night, or in stormy weather of the sayde season, the older dogges baroke, ball, howle, and yell (yea notwithstanding they bee roughly rated) neyther will they stay their tounge till the householde seruautes awake, ryse, search, and see the burning of the fyre, which beyng perceaned they vse voluntary silence, and cease from yolping This hath bene, and is founde true by tryall, in sundry partes of England. There was no faynting faith in that Dogge, which when his Master by a mischaunce in hunting stumbled and fell toppling downe a deepe dytche beyng vnable to recouer of himselfe, the Dogge signifying his masters mishappe, reskue came, and he was hayled up by a rope, whom the Dogge seeyng almost drawne up to the edge of the dytche, cheerefully saluted, leaping and skipping vpon his master as though he woulde haue imbraced hym, beyng glad of his presence, whose longer absence he was lothe to laoke. Some Dogges there be, which will not suffer fyery coales to lye skattered about the hearthe, but with their pawes will rake up the burnyng coales, musyng and studying fyrst with themselues how it might be conueniently be done. And if so bee that the coales caste to great a heate then will they bury them in ashes and so remoue them forward to a fyt place wyth theyr noses. Other Dogges bee there which exequute the office of a Farmer in the nyghte tyme. For when his master goeth to bedde to take his naturall sleepe, And when,

A hundred barres of brasse and yron boltes,
Make all things safe from startes and from reuoltes.
VVhen Ianus keeps the gate with Argos eye,
That daungers none approch, ne mischiefes nye.

As Virgill vaunteth in his verses, Then if his master byddeth him go abroad, he lingereth not, but raungeth ouer all his lands lying there about, more diligently, I wys, then any farmer himselfe. And if he finde anything their that is strange and pertaining to other persons besides his master, whether it be man, woman, or beast, he drineth them out of the ground, not meddling with any thing which doth belong to the possession and vse of his master, But how much faythfulnes, so much diuersitie there is in their natures,

For there { Which baroke only with free and open be some, { throat but will not bite,
{ Which doe both baroke and byte,
{ Which bite bitterly before they baroke, }

The first are not greatly to be feared, because they themselves are fearefull, and fearefull dogges (as the prouerbe importeth) baroke most vehemently.

The second are dangerous, it is wisdoms to take heede of them because they sounde, as it were, an Alarum of an afterolappe, and these dogges must not be ouer much moued or prouoked, for then they take on outrageously as if they were madde, watching to set the print of their teeth in the fleshe. And these kinde of dogges are feare and eager by nature.

The thirde are deadly, for they flye upon a man, without vtterance of voyce, snatch at him, and catche him by the throate, and most cruelly byte out colloppes of fleasha. Feare these kind of Curres (if thou bee wise and circumspect about thine owne safetic) for they be stoute and stubborne dogges, and set vpon a man at a sodden vnwares. By these signes and tokens, by these notes and arguementes our men discerne the cowardly curre from the couragious dogge the bolde from the fearefull, the butcherly from the gentle and tractable, Moreouer they coniecture that a whelp of an yll kinde is not worthe the keeping and that no dogge can serue the sundry vses of men so aptly and so conueniently as this sort of whom we haue so largely written already. For if any be disposed to drawe the aboue named seruices into a table, what mā more clearly, and with more vehemency of voyce giveth warning eyther of a wastefull beaste, or of a spoiling theefe than this? who by his barking (as good as a burning beaçon) foreshoweth hassards at hand? What maner of beast stronger? what seruānt to his master more louing? what companion more trustie? what watchman more vigilant? what reuenger more constant? what messenger more speedie? what water bearer more painefull? Finally what packhorse more patient? And thus much concerning English Dogges, first of the gentle kinde, secondly of the courser kinde. Nowe it remaineth that we deliuer vnto you the Dogges of a mungrell or a currishe kinde, and then will wee performe our taske.

¶ A Diall pertaining to the fourth Section.

Dogs comprehended in y ^e fourth section are these	{ The shepherds dogge The Mastine or Bandogge }	which hath sundry names deriued frō sundry circumstances as	{ The keeper or watchman The butchers dogge The messenger or carrier The Mooner The water drawer The Tinkers curr The fencer, }
--	---	---	---

{ called in Latine Canes Rustici. }

The fifth Section of this treatise.

Containing Curres of the mungrell and rascall sort and first of the Dogge called in Latine, Admonitor and of vs in Englishe VVappe or VVarner.

F such dogges as keep not their kinde, of such as are mingled out of sundry sortes not imitating the conditions of some one certaine spice, because they resëble no notable shape, nor exercise any worthy property of the true perfect and gentle kind, it is not necessarÿe that I write any more of them, but to banishe them as vnprofitable implements, out of the boundes of my Booke, vnprofitable I say for any use that is commendable, except to intertaine straügers with their barking in the day time, giuing warnyng to them of the house, that such & such be newly come, wherevpon wee call them admonishing Dogges, because in that point they performe their office.

Of the Dogge called Turnespete in Latine Veruersator.

THere is comprehended, vnder the curres of the coursest kinde, a certaine dogge in kythen seruice excellent. For whē any meate is to bee roasted they go into a wheele which they turning rounde about with the waight of their bodies, so diligently looke to their businesse, that no drudge nor skullion can doe the feate more cunningly. Whom the popular sort herevpon call Turnespets, being the last of all those which wee haue first mencioned.

Of the Dogge called the Daunser, in Latine

Saltator or Tympanista.

There be also dogges among vs of a mungrell kind which are taught and exercoised to daunoe in measure at the musicaall sounde of an instrument, as, at the iust stroke of the drombe, at the sweete accent of the Cyterne, & tuned strings of the harmonious Harpe showing many pretty triokes by the gesture of their bodies. As to stand bolte upright, to lye flat vpon the grounde, to turne rounde as a ringe holding their tiales in their teeth, to begge for theyr meate, and sundry such pproperties, which they learne of theyr vagabundicall masters, whose instrumentes they are to gather gaine, withall in Citie, Country, Towne, and Village. As some which carry olde apes on their shoulders in coloured iackets to moue men to laughter for a litle luore.

Of other Dogges, a short conclusion, wonderfully ingendred within the coastes of this country.

Three sortes of them,	}	The first bred of a bytch and a wolfe,	In Latine Lyciscus.
		The second of a bytyche and a foxe,	In Latine Lacena.
		The third of a beare and a bandogge,	In Latine Vrcanus.

OF the first we haue none naturally bred within the borders of England. The reason is for the want of wolves, without whom no such kinde of dog can bee ingendred. Againe it is deliuered unto thee in this discourse, how and by what meanes, by whose benefitte, and within what circuite of tyme, this country was cleerely discharged of rauenyng wolfes, and none at all left, no, not to the least number, or the beginnyng of a number, which is an Vnari.

Of the second sort we are not vtterly voyde of some, because this our Englishe soyle is not free from foxes (for in deede we are not without a multitude of them in so much as diuerse keepe, foster, and fæde them in their houses among their houndes and dogges, eyther for some maladie of mind, or for some sicknesse of body,) which peraduenture the savour of that subtyll beast would eyther mitigate or expell.

The thirde kinde which is bred of a Beare and a Bandogge we want not heare in England, (A straunge and wonderfull effect, that cruell enimyes should enter into y^e worke of copulation & bring forth so sauage a curre.) Undoubtedly it is euen so as we haue reported, for the fyery heate of theyr fleshe, or rather the pricking thorne, or most of all, the tyckling lust of lechery, beareth such swinge and sway in them, that there is no contrairistie for the time, but of constraint they must ieyne to ingender. And why should not this bee consonant to truth? why shoulde not these beastes breede in this lande, as well as in other forreigne nations? For wee reede that Tigers and dogges in Hircania, that Lyons and Dogges in Arcadia, and that wolfes and dogges in Francia, couple and procreate. In men and women also lyghtened with the lanterne of reason (but vtterly voyde of vertue) that foolishe, frantique, and fleshely action, yet naturally sealed in vs) worketh so effectually, & many tymes it doth reconcile enimyes, set foes at freendship, vnanimite, and atonement, as Moria mencioneth. The Vrcans which is bred of a beare and a dogge,

Is fearce, is fell, is stoute and stronge,
 And byteth sore to fleshe and bone,
 His furious force indureth longe
 In rage he will be rul'de of none.

■

That I may vse the wordes of the Poet Gratius. This dogge exceedeth all other in cruell conditions, his leering and fleering lookes, his stearne and sauage vissage, maketh him in sight feareful and terrible, he is violent in fighting, & wheresoeuer he setteth his tenterhooke teeth, he taketh such sure & fast holde, that a man may sooner teare and rende him in sunder, then lose him and seperate his chappes. He passeth not for the Wolfe, the Beare, the Lyon, nor the Bulle and may wortherly (as I think,) be companiö with Alexanders dogge which came out of India. But of these, thus much, and thus farre may seeme sufficient.

A starte to outlandishe Dogges in this conclusion, not impertinent to the Authors purpose.

VSe and custome hath intertaind other dogges of an outlandishe kinde, but a fewe and the same beyng of a pretty bygnesse, I meane Iseland, dogges curled & rough al ouer, which by reason of the length of their heare make showe neither of face nor of body. And yet these curres, forsoothe, because they are so straunge are greatly set by, esteemed, taken vp, and made of many times in the roome of the Spaniell gentle or comforter. The natures of men is so moued, may rather marryed to nonelties without all reason, wyt, iudgement or perseuerance. Ερωμιν αλλοτριαν, παρορμιν ευγγιντις.

Outlandishe toyes we take with delight
Things of our owne nation we haue in despight.

Which fault remaineth not in vs concerning dogges only, but for artificers also. And why? it is to manyfest that wee disdayne and contempne our owne workmen, be they neuer so skilfull, be they neuer so cunning, be they neuer so excellent. A beggerly beast brought out of barbarous borders, fro' the vttermost cuntryes Northward, &c., we stare at, we gase at, we muse, we maruaile at, like an asse of Cumanum, like Thales with the brasen shancks, like the man in the Moone.

The which default Hippocrates marked when he was alyue as euidently appeareth in the beginnyng of his booke περὶ ἀγμῶν, so intituled and named:

And we in our worcke entituled De Ephemera Britanica, to the people of England haue more plentifully expressed. In this kinde looke which is most blocklishe, and yet most waspish, the same is most esteemed, and not amonge Citizens onely and iolly gentlemen, but amonge lustie Lordes also, and noble men, and daintie courtier ruffling in their ryotous ragges. Further I am not to wade in the foorde of this discourse, because it was my purpose to satisfie your expectation with a short treatise (most learned Conrade) not wearysome for me to wryte, nor tedious for you to peruse. Among other things which you haue receaued at my handes heretofore, I remember that I wrote a seuerall description of the Getulian Dogge, because there are but a fewe of them and therefore very seldome seene. As touching Dogges of other kyndes you your selfe haue taken earnest paine, in writing of them both lyuely, learnedly and largely. But because wee haue drawne this libell more at length then the former which I sent you (and yet briefer than the nature of the thing myght well beare) regardyng your more earnest and necessary studdies. I will conlude makyng a rehearsall notwithstanding (for memoryes sake) of certayne specialties contayned in the whole body of this my breuiary. And because you participate principall pleasure, in the knowledge in the common and vsuall names of Dogges (as I gather by the course of your letters) I suppose it not amysse to deliuer vnto you a shorte table contaynyng as well the Latine as the Englishe names, and to render a reason of euery particular appellation, to th'intent that no scruple may remaine in this point, but that euery thing may bee sifted to the bare bottome.

A Diall pertaining to the Fifte Section.

Dogges contained in this last Di-all or Table are	}	The Wapp or Warner, The Turnespet, The dauncer,	}	called in Latine Canes Rustici
---	---	---	---	--

A Supplement or Addition containing a demonstration of Dogges names how they had their Originall.

She names contayned in the generall table, for so much as they signifie nothing to you being a straunger, and ignoraunt of the Englishe tounge, except they be interpreted: As we haue giuen a reason before of y^e latine words so mean we to doe no leasse of the Englishe, that every thing maye be manifest unto your vnderstanding. Wherein I intende to obserue the same order which I haue followed before.

The names of such Dogges as be contained in the first section.

S*Agas*, in Englishe Hunde, is deriued of our English word hunte. One letter changed in another, namely T, into D, as Hunt, Hunde, whom (if you coniecture to be so named of your country worde Hunde which signifieth the generall name Dogge, because of the similitude and likenesse of the wordes I will not stand in contradiction (friend Gesner) for so muche as we retaine among vs to this day many Dutche wordes which the Saxons left at such time as they occupied this country of Britane. Thus much also vnderstand, that as in your language Hunde is the common word, so in our naturall tounge dogge is the vniuersall, but Hunde is perticular and a speciall, for it signifieth such a dogge onely as serueth to hunt, and therefore it is called a hunde.

E

Of the Gasehound.

The Gasehounde called in latine Agasæus, hath his name of the sharpnesse and stedfastnesse of his eyesight. By which vertue he compasseth that which otherwise he cannot by smelling attaine. As we haue made former relation for to gase is earnestly to viewe and beholde, from whence floweth the derination of this dogges name.

Of the Grehounde.

The Grehounde called Leporarius, hath his name of this word, Gre, which word soundeth Gradus in latine, in Englishe degree. Because among all dogges these are the most principall, occupying the chiefest place, and being simply and absolutely the best of the gentle kinde of houndes.

Of the Leuyer or the Lyemmer.

This dogge is called a Leuyner, for his lightnesse, which in latine soundeth Leuitas, Or a Lyemmer which worde is borrowed of Lyemme which the latinists name Lorum; and wherefore we call him a Leuyner of this worde Leuitas (as we doe many things besides) why we deriue and drawe a thousand of our tearmes out of the Greeke, the Latine, the Italian, the Dutch, the French, and the Spanishe tounge: (Out of which fountaines indeede, they had their original issue.) How many words are buried in the grave of forgetfullnes? growne out of vae? wrested awrye and perversly corrupted by diuers defaultes? we wil declare at large in our booke intituled, Simphonia vocum Britannicarum.

Of the Tumbler.

Among houndes the Tumbler called in latine Vertagus, is the last, which commeth of this worde Tumbler flowing first of al out of the French fountaine. For as we say Tumble so they Tumbier, reseruing one sense and signification, which the latinists comprehende vnder this worde Vertere, So that we see thus much, that Tumbler commeth of Tumbier, the vowel, I, changed into the Liquid L, after y^e maner of our speache, Contrary to the French and the Italian tounge. In which two languages, A Liquid before a Vowell for the most part is turned into another Vowell, As, may be perceaued in the example of these two wordes, Implere & plano, for Impiere & piano, L, before, E changed into, I, and L, before A, turned into I, also. This I thought conuenient for a taste.

The names of such Dogges as be contained in the second Section.

After such as serue for hunting orderly doe follow such as serue for hawking and fowling. Among which the principall and chiefest is the Spaniell, called in Latine Hispaniolus, borrowing his name of Hispania Spaine, wherein wee Englishe men not pronouncing the Aspiration H, Nor the Vowell I, for quicknesse and redinesse of speach say roundly A Spaniell.

Of the Setter.

The second sorte of this second division and second section, is called a Setter, in latine Index, Of the worde Set which signifieth in Englishe that which the Latinistes meane by this word Locum designare, y^e reason is rehersed before more largely, it shall not neede to make a new repetition.

Of the water Spaniell or Finder.

The water Spaniell consequently followeth, called in Latine Aquaticus, in English a water spaniell, which name is compoude of two simple wordes, namely Water, which in Latine soüdeth Aqua, wherein he swymmeth. And Spaine Hispania, the country frō whence they came, Not that England wanted such kinde of Dogges, (for they are naturally bred and ingendred in this country.) But because they beare the generall and common name of these Dogges synce the time they were first brought ouer out of Spaine. And wee make a certaine difference in this sort of Dogges, eyther for some thing which in theyr voyce is to be marked, or for something which in their qualities is to be considered, as for an example in this kinde called the Spaniell by the apposition and putting to of this word water, which two coupled together sounde water-spaniell. He is also called a fynder, in Latine Inquisitor, because that by serious and secure seeking, he findeth such things as be lost, which word Finde in English is that which the Latines meane by this Verbe Inuenire This dogge hath this name of his property because the principall point of his seruice consisteth in the premisses.

The names of such Dogges as be contained in the thirde Section.

Now leauing the seruie we of hunting and hauking dogs, it remaineth that we runne ouer the residue, whereof some be called, fine dogs, some course, other some mungrels or rascalls. The first is the Spaniell gentle called Canis Meliteus, because it is a kinde of dogge accepted among gentles, Nobles, Lordes, Ladies, &c., who make much of them vouchsafeing to admit them so farre into their company, that they will not onely lull them in theyr lappes, but kysse them with their lippes, and make them theyr prettie playfellowes. Such a one was Gorgons litle puppie mencioned by Theocritus Siracusis, who taking his journey, straightly charged & commaunded his mayde to see to his Dogge as charely and warely as to his childe: To call him in alwayes that he wandred not abroade, as well as to rock the babe a sleepe, crying in the cradle. This puppytly and peasantly curre, (which some frumpingly tearme fysteing hounds) serue in a maner to no good vse except, (As we haue made former relation) to succour and strengthen quailing and quammning stomackes to bewray bawdery, and filthy abominable leandnesse (whiche a litle dogge of this kinde did in Sicilia) as Ælianus in his, 7, book of beastes, and 27, chapter reoordeth.

The names of such dogges as be contained in the fourth Section.

OF dogges vnder the courser kinde, we will deale first with the shepherds dogge, whom we call the Bandogge, the Tydogge, or the Mastiue, the first name is imputed to him for service Quoniam pastori famulatur, because he is at the shepherds his masters commaundement. The seconde a Ligamento of the band or chaine wherewith he is tyed. The thirde a Sagina, of the fatnesse of his body.

For this kinde of dogge which is vsually tyed, is myghty, grosse, and fat fed. I know this that Augustinus Niphus calleth this Mastinus (which we call Mastiuus.) And that Albertus writeth how the Lyciscus is ingendred by a beare and a wolfe. Notwithstanding the self same Author taketh it for the most part pro Molosso. A dogge of such a cuntry.

The names of such dogges as be contained in the fite Section.

OF mungrels and rascalls somewhat is to be spoken. And among these, of y^e VVappe or Turnespet which name is made of two simple words, that is of Turne which in Latine soundeth Vertere, and of spete which is Veru, or spede for the Englishe word inclineth closer to the Italian imitation : Veruorsator, Turnspet. He is called also VVaup, of the naturall noise of his voyce VVau, which he maketh in barking. But for the better and the redyer sounde, the vowell, u, is chaunged into the oösonant, p, so y for waup we say wappe. And yet I wot well that Nonius boroweth his Baubari of the natural voyce Bau, as the Græcians doe their βειζιυ of wau.

Now when you vnderstand this that Saltare in Latine signifieth Dansare in Englishe. And that our dogge therevpon is called a daunser and in the Latine Saltator, you are so farre taught as you were desirous to learne, and now suppose I, there remaineth nothing, but that your request is fully accomplished.

The winding vp of this worke, called the Supplement, &c.

THus (friend Gesner) you haue, not only the kindes of our countrey dogges, but their names also, as well in latine as in Englishe, their offices, seruices, diuersities, natures properties, that you can demaunde no more of me in this matter. And albeit I haue not satisfied your minde peraduöture (who suspecteth al speede in the performaunce of your requeste employed, to be meere delayes) because I stayde the setting fourth of that vmpfect pamphlet which, fve yeares ago, I sent to you as a prinate friende for your own reeding, and not to be printed, and so made common, yet I hope (hauing like the beare lickt ouer my younge) I haue waded in this worke to your contentation, which delay hath made somewhat better and δυσίγου φερρίδης, after witte more meete to be perused.

The ende of this treatise.

FINIS.

❁ An Alphabetical Index, declaring the whole discourse of this abridgement. The number importeth the Page.

A.

A Bridgement of Doggs.	1
Abstinance from lost goods	27
Aelianus his opinion of bloodhoun- dounes.	6
Aelianus and Aelius opinion of the beauer.	19
Alfredus maintained iustice.	27
An example of rebellion, and the reward of the same.	26
An example of loue in a dogge.	31
Arcadian dogge.	36

B.

Bandogges bayte the beare and the bull.	25
Blondus opinion of a dogge.	30
Bloody and butcherlye curre.	32
Beauer called a water dogge.	19
Beauer wherein hee is like a dogge.	19
Beasts presented of succor.	5
Bloodhounes howe they are knowne.	5
Bloodhounds conditions in hū- ting.	ibidem
Bloodhounds whence they bor- rowe their names.	ibid.

Bloodhounes pursue without wearinesse.	6
Bloodhounes discerne theenes from true men.	6
Bloodhounes hunte by water and by land.	ibid.
Bloodhounes whue they cease from hunting.	ibidem
Bloodhounes why they are kept close in the day, and let lose in the night.	ibide.
Bloodhounds haue not libertye always to raunge at wyll.	7
Bloodhounes are their maisters guides.	ibid.
Borders of England pested with pylferers.	ibidem
Bloodhounds why they are vsed in England and Scotland.	ibi.
Bloodhounes take not the wa- ter naturally.	ibidem
Bloodhounes called Brache in Scottishe.	ibidem
Bloodhounds when they bark.	8
Butchers dogge.	28
Butchers dogge why so called.	ibide.

C.

Caius booke of dogges twyse written.	1
---	---

The Table.

E.

England is not without Scottish dogges.	2
Election in a gase hound.	8
England and VVales are cleare from wolues.	24
Edgar what tyme King of England.	ibidem
Epirus a countrey in Græcia.	28

F.

Foxe hunted by the gasehound.	8
Flight preuenteth peryl.	9
Froisart historiographer.	10
Flint Castle.	ibide.
French dogges how their skins be speckled.	15
Fisher dogge none in Englande.	18
Fisher dogge, doubtfull if there be be any such.	ibidem
Faulcon and an Eagle fight.	26
Faulcon killed for fighting with an Eagle.	ibid.
Fire betrayed by a dogge.	30
Fire raked vp by a dogge	31
Farmers keepe dogges.	ibid.
Fearful dogges baroke sorest.	32
Foxes kept for sundrye causes.	36
Foxes holsome in houses.	ibid.

G.

Geener desirous of knowledge.	1
-------------------------------	---

Geener canest in experimentes.	ibi.
Gasehound whence he hath his name.	9
Gasehounds vsed in the North.	ibidem
Gasehound sometimes loseth his waye.	ibidem
Grehound light footed.	ibid.
Grehounds special seruice.	ibi.
Greyhoundes strong and swifts.	ibidem
Grehounds game.	10
Grehounds spare of body.	ibi.
Grehounds nature wonderfull.	ibid.
Grehounde of King Richarde.	ibid.
Gentle dogge.	14
Gratius Poet his opinion.	37
Getalian dogge.	38

H.

Hunting wherein it consisteth.	2
Hunting and fowleing doo differ.	3
Hunting dogges, fise speciall kinds.	ibid.
Harryer exoalleth in smelling.	ibidem
Harryer how he is known.	ibi.
Hare hunted by the gasehound.	8
Henry Duke of Lancaster.	10
Hole of the Conny their haue of health.	11

The Table.

N. Nature hath made some dogges for hunting. 4 Naturall properties of the water spaniel 16 No Volues in Englande nor VVales. 24 No place free from theenes. 27 Nothing escapeth the spoiler. 28 Nonius bau wau. 29 Names of the mastiue. 33 Names of the spaniell gentle. 22 Names of Dogges whence they were deriued. 39, 40, 41, 42, &c. O. One dogge hunteth dinerse beastes. 4 Owners of bloundhounde howe they vse them. 6 Order of the Tumbler in hunting. 11 Of the Cumaneease. 37 Of brasen shanckt Thales. ibi. Otter. 7 P. Properties of a bloundhound issuing from desire. 7 Proportion and making of the water spaniel. 17 Pupine a byrde and a fyshe. 18 Princes pallace pestered with theenes. 16 Paris in Fraunce. 30	R. Rome maintained dogges. 28 Rare toyes meete for Englishe men. 37 S. Smelling is not incident to the gasehound. 8 Spaniels of a gentle kinde. 14 Spaniels two sortes. ibide. Spaniel of the lande what properties. ibidem Spaniel for the hauke and the nette. ibide. Spaniels some haue special names. ibide. Spaniel a name vniuersall. 15 Spaniels the colour of their skines. ibidem Setters make no noyse, or very litle, in their game. ibidem Setters giue attendaunce. ibide. Setters behavior. ibide. Setter whence he hath his name. 16 Seacalfe not numbred amonge Englishe dogges. 19 Sea calfe called a dogge fish. ibi. Seele or sea veale. ibidem Spaniell gentle or the comforter. 20 Shepherdes dogge, 23. The necessity of their seruice, ibi. The proportion of them. ibidem Shepherdes what benefitte they
--	--

The Table.

reape by their dogges.	24	Thales with the brazen feete	37
Sheepherdes in what countreyes they go before their sheepe.
	ibidem
Sheepe howe they flocke at the sheepherds whistle.
	ibid.
Sheepherds Dogge choose and take.
	ibid.
Salacones vaine glorious.	27

V.

Vertue of the comforter.	21
Valentines law for vagabundes.	27
Virgils vearse.	31

T.

Terrars hunt the badger and the Foxe.	4
Terrars hunt as ferrytts hunt,	ibi.
Terrars conditions.	ibid
Terrars holde fast with theyr teeth.	5
Tumblers crafty and fraudu- lent.	11
Tumblers why so named,	ibid.
their trade in hūting, ibi, their dissembling of friendship, ibi, they hunt against the wind	12
Theeuish dogges.	ibidem
Theeuish Dogge, a night curre,	ibidem
Theenes feare no law, 27. Some steale for neede, ibid. Some to maintaine brauery.	ibi.
Tynckers curre beare burthens, 29, their conditions, ibi, they loue their masters.	ibid.
Two suiters to one woman,	30
Turnespet painefull in the kyt- chen	24

W.

WVatchwordes make Dogges per- fect in game	8
WVonder of a Hare or Leue- rit,	16
WVater spaniell called the fin- der,	ibidem
WVater spaniels what proper- ties.	ibidem
WVater spaniels their propor- tion, 17, howe they be descri- bed by D. Caius .	ibidem
WVhy so called.	ibidem
WVhere their game lyeth and what it is.	ibidem
WVhy they are called fynders,	ibidem
WVanton women wanton puppies.	20
WVolues bloudsucking beastes, 23, none England nor wales, ibidem, three hundred payde yearely to Prince Edgar.	ibid.
WVarnar what seruice he doth.	34
WVappes vnprofitable dogges.	ibidem

The Table.

Y.

Young dogges baroke much.	8	Yll kinde whelpes not regarded.	32
Yolping and yelling in a bandogge.	31

The ende of the Index.

¶ Faultes escaped
thus to b'amended.

In the last page of the Epistle Dedicatory, Quæ for Qui.

Page. 3.	Grecians for Græcians .
Page. 28.	Canis Cultos for Canis Custos .
Page. 38.	Britanica for Britannica .

Other faultes we referre to the correction of the Reader.

There bee also certaine Accents wanting in the Greeke words which, because we had them not, are pretermitted; so haue wee byn fayne to let the Greeke words run their full length, for lacke of Abbreviations.

Studio & industrie,
Abrahami
Flemingi.

LONDON :

PRINTED BY A. BEADLEY, 170, STRAND, W.C.

1880.